NEUTRINO: THE INSTANT MOVIE

GILDED BALLOON, 8.45pm, UNTIL
AUGUST 30

★★★★★

Neutrino have already had a tip of the hat from an old master in their particular genre. Mike McShane, formerly of Whose Line Is It Anyway? and starring in Fatboy, John Clancy's play at the Assembly Rooms, has guest-starred in this film, improvised and shot live for you while-you-wait. It is an ever-evolving experience and one gets the impression from a single performance that Bob Wilfong, who helped devise the format initially, is also an extremely talented improviser.

One of the three strands in our movie on the night is very funny, one quite funny and the third not funny at all. The format is so engaging and so deftly performed, that the whole is in many ways greater than the sum of the parts. You will want to see it again.
